PRINCIPAL'S MESSAGE

Dear Parents/Guardians,

I wanted to let you know there was a delay in mailing the Interim Reports for Grades 1 - 5 and they were just mailed yesterday. Those grades may not be accurate now since students have been working for additional weeks and hopefully the grades have improved. If you have any questions, you can check progressbook or contact your child's teacher.

I've received several calls and emails about our plan to return to school full time. As of now I don't have any specific information to share. Our Superintendent plans to send out a survey soon to families and staff to gather feedback.

We are celebrating Right to Read Week next week. Students have been submitting Book Shoutouts and Recommendations that will be shared on the morning announcements. Also if you child would like to participate in the fun they can wear silly or mismatched socks on Monday or Thursday and their favorite hat on Tuesday or Friday.

I hope everyone has a great weekend!

April :)

FEBRUARY IS BLACK HISTORY MONTH

People get upset not because of the adversity they face but because their adversity reveals who they really are - Inky Johnson

Our teachers continue to read books that represent different abilities, cultures, and skin colors to help us realize we are more similar than different. It allows all students to see themselves represented in the books all year.

VIRTUAL READ-ALOUD

Thank you to Ms. Miller for arranging a virtual read-aloud with the Lacrosse Players at The Ohio State University. It is the 2nd and 7th Foundation and their mission is to promote reading for students by providing them with free books and having student college athletes participate by paying it forward and teaching the reading lesson to the kids. Our 3rd graders were really engaged during the read-aloud - tons of positive feedback especially when they each received the book that was read virtually. They were able to work on their writing skills as they wrote thank you notes to the athletes and the foundation for their time and the free book.
